

From Evidence to Policy

New Research Inaugurates Human Development Perspectives Series

Please join us for the launch of the World Bank's Human Development Network's new Human Development Perspectives series, which presents key research in the field of human development. The series will help developing countries and their partners get more mileage and impact out of their investments in human capital.

During the launch, discussions will focus on the first two books in the series. Making Schools Work examines how better accountability processes in 11 developing countries resulted in increased enrollment, student learning and completion rates. No Small Matter reviews the evidence on early childhood development and its links to poverty and shocks. The launch will occur during the Human Development Network's biennial HD Forum.
