

Gender in Agriculture Sourcebook

Quotes from Reviewers

“The Sourcebook . . . is a timely and extremely important document as the criticality of increased agricultural investment is never more so clear as today with the potential crisis facing the world’s poor with soaring food prices.”

– Nata Duvvury, former Director of Gender, Violence and Rights, International Center for Research on Women (ICRW)

“This is a very important contribution. I hope that it is widely read by all involved in land tenure policy (not just those who are interested in gender). There is sound analysis and advice on how to ensure that land administration programs can strengthen women’s property rights.”

– Ruth Meizen-Dick, Senior Research Fellow, International Food Policy and Research Institute (IFPRI)

“The Sourcebook is masterful in integrating gender issues in meaningful ways into specific sectors within agriculture . . . many case studies presented in the Sourcebook can be used in my teaching and training”

– Mary Hill Rojas, former Senior Manager of the Women in Development Project Management Unit at Chemonics, International

“This book is an important step towards revitalizing attention to gender equality in the agricultural sector . . . this Sourcebook is a new compilation of ideas and examples, which will guide practitioners in ensuring that new attention to agriculture is infused with up-to-date knowledge on gender issues.”

– Deborah Rubin, Director, Cultural Practice

“The Sourcebook . . . is a timely and highly relevant piece of work . . . the overall usefulness of the document to practitioners is unarguable.”

– Indira Ekanayake, Task Team Leader, Latin America and the Caribbean Region–Agriculture and Rural Development, World Bank
