Being A Good Giver Takes More Than Just Heart

Donating to charity requires lots of heart—and the facts. That’s what GuideStar is all about (http://guidestar.org). It gives you unbiased information on more than one million nonprofit organizations. It doesn’t tell you which charities to support because it believes that only you know which causes are important to you. Nor does it rate or evaluate charities.

Great decisions start with great data. So, with so many charities and so much data, where do you begin?

1 Clarify your values.
   • Ask yourself: “What is important to me?” The environment? Education? Hunger? Animal Welfare? Helping sick children?
   • Do this before you open your checkbook, volunteer your time, or look at that letter from a charity.

2 Identify your preferences.
   • Where should the charity do its work ... in your neighborhood, region, the nation, or internationally?
   • Ask yourself if you want to support a large or small charity, a new or an old one.

3 Search the GuideStar database to find charities that meet your criteria.

4 Focus on the mission.
   • Look at each charity’s description in the GuideStar search results, on its Web site, or in its literature.
   • Find the nonprofits that fit best with your values.

5 Eliminate organizations that don’t meet your criteria.
   • Now you’re ready to look more closely at these organizations.

6 Verify a charity’s legitimacy.
   • If you find a charity on GuideStar (www.guidestar.org), you know it’s legitimate. All nonprofits listed on GuideStar are either registered with the IRS or have provided proof of their status as legitimate nonprofits that meet the IRS criteria for charitable organizations.
   • If the charity is not on GuideStar, ask to see its letter of determination.
   • If the organization is faith based, ask to see its official listing in a directory for its denomination.

7 Get the cold, hard facts.
   • A reputable organization will:
     • Define its mission and programs clearly.
     • Have measurable goals.
     • Use concrete criteria to describe its achievements.

8 Compare apples to apples.
   • Be sure to compare charities that do the same kind of work, especially if you’re looking at their finances. The type of work a charity does can affect its operating costs dramatically.
   • Do this before you open your checkbook, volunteer your time, or look at that letter from a charity.

9 Avoid charities that won’t share information or pressure you.
   • Reputable nonprofits:
     • Will discuss their programs and finances.
     • Don’t use pressure tactics.
     • Are willing to send you literature about their work or direct you to a Website.
     • Will take “no” for an answer.

10 Trust your instincts.
   • If you still have doubts about a charity, don’t contribute to it. Instead, find another nonprofit that does the same kind of work and with which you feel comfortable, and then make your donation.
