Acknowledgments

This book was prepared by staff in the World Bank's Trade Department, including experts from the Poverty Reduction and Economic Management Trade Unit, the Development Economics Department (Trade Research team and Prospects Group), and the World Bank Institute as well as the Latin America and Africa regions. We also benefited from the contributions of leading academics from around the world. All of the contributors gave generously of their time to prepare these papers, often deferring other urgent work to produce a much needed chapter. This compilation would not have been possible without their willingness to share their considerable expertise and their devotion to the ideas of this book.

Dorota Nowak managed the project with deftness and dedication from conception to publication. Her farsighted planning, systematic attention to detail, and unflappable tenacity made the book a reality. Carlos A. Primo Braga, William J. Martin, and Bernard Hoekman provided unfailingly generous comments, suggestions, and help. John Panzer, manager of the PREM Trade Unit, provided constant encouragement and willingly pitched in whenever necessary. The book was produced under the general direction of Uri Dadush, director of the Trade Department, and under the guidance of Danny Leipziger, vice-president of the Poverty Reduction and Economic Management Network.

And finally, I would like to thank the production team who worked under Dorota Nowak's direction—Maria Amparo Gamboa who typeset the book and was truly a mainstay of this project through too many weekends; Michael Paul for proofreading and assisting in other matters; Awatif Abuzeid for assistance with the front matter; Mombert Hoppe, Martha Denisse Pierola, and Katherine Rollins for their work on the figures and tables; Araceli J. Jimeno who assisted with revisions; and Abdennour Azeddine for his invaluable technical support. Steven Kennedy, with his careful editorial pen, managed to improve even the most turgid of our prose. Stuart Tucker of the World Bank's Office of the Publisher coordinated the printing process.
