Global Imbalances: A Contemporary Rashomon Tale with Five Interpretations...

In the classic Kurosawa film Rashomon, a heinous crime is perpetrated in a forest. This crime is reported by four witnesses, each giving his or her own point of view. Who is telling the truth? Who is lying and what is truth? Which version of the story, if any, is the real truth about what happened in the forest?

Today, the large global imbalances are a similar heinous event that requires explanation and interpretation. In this contemporary Rashomon drama, the basic facts are known: the US is running large fiscal and current account deficits while the rest of the world is running large current account surpluses. The flow of capital that is financing these US twin deficits is mostly (three quarters or so) coming from foreign central banks - mostly in Asia but not exclusively - that are aggressively intervening to prevent an appreciation of their currencies.

Swedish politics, management, communication, slavery

My oldest son called from Sweden to say that he doesn't understand the media reporting on an open letter that I sent to one of the Swedish daily newspapers. "You declared black on white that you don't want to be part of speculations about a new leader for the social democratic party and then they draw the conclusion that you want to become a new leader! What is this?!" And I said that that was the proper question to ask from somebody studying political science. The debate ha...

The Unity week

Ayatollah Montazeri named 12th of Rabi'olavval (the third month of the Arabic year) until 17th as The Unity Week, about twenty years ago. Its reason was adjoining Shiite and Sunnite. The Sunnites suppose the 12th as the Prophet Mohammad's birthday and the Shiites suppose the 17th. Hope these two birthdays be a chance to destroy disunions as celebration.

In our country, the most of people are Shiite but there are also Sunnites living at frontier and somehow in central localities. The confronting Shiite and Sunnite remembrances are of the most tragic events of religions' confronting.

In these conditions that the entire world proceeds to religions' conversations for guarding religion, Muslims – Shiite and Sunnite – need unity more than the past.

There's no denying that we're going through some tough times right now. It seems like every day I read or hear news stories that focus on the negative. I won't say that it's all undeserved. However, every once in a while there's a good news story that I wish would get a little more

Baghdad Burning

... I'll meet you 'round the bend my friend, where hearts can heal and souls can mend...

Saved by the Carrots...

These last few days have been explosive- quite literally. It started about 4 days ago and it hasn't let up since. They say there were around 14 car bombs in Baghdad alone a couple of days ago- although we only heard 6 from our area. Cars are making me very nervous lately. All cars look suspicious- small ones and large ones. Old cars and new cars. Cars with drivers and cars parked in front of restaurants and shops. They all have a sinister look to them these days.

The worst day for us was the day before yesterday. We were sitting in the living room with an aunt and her 16-year-old son and listening patiently as she scolded the household for still having our rugs spread. In Iraq, people don't keep their carpeting all year round. We begin removing the carpeting around April and it doesn't come back until around October. We don't have wall to wall carpeting here like abroad. Instead, we have lovely rugs that we usually spread in the middle of the room. The best kinds are made in Iran, specifically in Tabriz or Kashan. They are often large, heavy and intricately designed. Tabriz and Kashan rugs are very expensive and few families actually have them any more. Most people who do have Tabriz rugs in Baghdad got them through an inheritance.

We have ordinary Persian rugs (which we suspect aren't really Persian at all). They aren't expensive or even

SEC to issue accounting report this month

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission plans to release this month a long-awaited report on off-balance-sheet accounting of the sort that featured in the Enron Corp. collapse and other recent corporate scandals, said a top SEC official on Tuesday.

"The month of May is when we will actually release that report" on special purpose entities, off-balance-sheet liabilities and related matters, said SEC Chief Accountant Donald Nicolaisen.

Striking a better balance: extractive industries review final report

Final report of the Extractive Industries Review

Can extractive industries projects be compatible with the World Bank Group's (WBG) goals of sustainable development and poverty reduction? In response to criticism of WBG involvement in extractive industries, the Extractive Industries Review was established three years ago to assess the Bank's role in this sector. Following stakeholder consultation, regional workshops, and six research projects, this final report concludes that

Governance Focus

Excellent new blog - Governance Focus - addressing corporate governance issues. Possibly more of interest to lawyers and those accounting types among us, but some great information and regular monitoring of governance news. The sidebar links are massive and comprehensive and are like a global governance portal.

(Governance Focus is a Blogspot site so considered likely to upset social order in rural China and therefore inaccessible to the 0.01% of Chinese internet users who haven't figured how to get around its blocking.)

Social capital, cultural capital: fact or fad?

Is social capital a concept for people who can't spell anthropology or those who can't get to terms with Foucault?

Social capital is attracting lot of interest these days, especially from policy.
