Peter Bakvis
Peter Bakvis is the director of the Washington Office of the International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC) and the associated Global Union Federations. Among his duties are to prepare ITUC/Global Unions’ policy statements presented to the IMF and World Bank, to lobby the international financial institutions (IFIs) on behalf of member organizations and to prepare reports on IFI policies for trade unions. The ITUC was created in November 2006 through the unification of two former international trade union bodies and represents 311 affiliated national organizations in 155 countries with a total membership of 175 million. Prior to assuming his current position in January 2000, he was employed for over 20 years with the Confédération des Syndicats Nationaux in Quebec, Canada, where he was director of research and later head of international affairs. His work has included training on economic policy for developing country unions, research on development issues from a labour perspective and participation in ILO conferences. He is currently a member of the UNDP’s civil society advisory committee and of a labour advisory group to the International Finance Corporation of the World Bank. He holds degrees in economics from two Canadian universities.

Arup Banerji
Arup Banerji is the Director for Social Protection and Labor at the World Bank. He was previously Senior Advisor at the Bank’s Independent Evaluation group, and Manager and Lead Economist for Human Development for the Bank’s Europe and Central Asia Region. At the Bank, he has worked in Eastern Europe, Central Asia, Africa and the Middle East – on a variety of issues relating to employment, social sector reforms, evaluation, governance, institutions, public sector reform, poverty reduction and economic growth strategies. He is a principal author of books including From Red to Gray on Aging Populations in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, Enhancing Job Opportunities in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, and World Development Report 2002 on the role of institutions in global economic development, as well as numerous other books, journal articles and discussion papers. Prior to joining the World Bank, he taught at the Center for Development Economics in Massachusetts and at the University of Pennsylvania. He holds a Ph.D. and a Master's degree in Economics from the University of Pennsylvania.

Bob Bednarzik
Robert W. Bednarzik is a Visiting Professor at Georgetown Public Policy Institute (GPPI), joining the faculty full time in 2004, after serving an Adjunct at GPPI for over 10 years, guiding thesis students interested in international and/or labor policy issues. Worked in public service at the U.S. Department of Labor for 30 years. Twenty of those years were spent as a Senior Economist in the Bureau of International Labor Affairs studying the impact of international phenomenon on U.S. workers’ employment and wages, and comparing how workers adjust to job loss with similar situations in other countries. He paid particular attention to the policies and programs necessary to support this adjustment. Spent the early part of his government career at the Bureau of Labor Statistics learning databases and analyzing the domestic employment situation. He served as chair of the OECD’s Employment Working Party for five years, responsible for reviewing chapters in the OECD’s flagship annual publication the Employment Outlook. Dr. Bednarzik also was part of OECD teams assigned to review the labor markets of Poland and the Czech Republic prior to their entry into the OECD. He served on the U.S.-European Union Working Group to guide joint work between the U.S. Department of Labor and the EU’s Commission on Employment and Social Policy. He was the senior staff person for the annual G8 Labor Ministers meetings. He participated and represented the U.S. Department of Labor at numerous international meetings and conferences at the OECD, EU, and the International Labor Organization (ILO).

Andreas Blom
Andreas Blom works as a Senior Education Economist in the World Bank’s department for Human Development in South Asia. He specializes in the economic policy analysis of human capital and creation of knowledge, and their efficient use in society. Andreas works with the Governments of India, Pakistan and Afghanistan to improve quality, access and financing of their higher education and training systems. In his previous position, Andreas worked seven years on higher education, training, labor markets and public spending in Latin America and the Caribbean. He was part of a team that supported student loan agencies in Latin America, in particular in Mexico and Colombia. He authored several global and regional studies on the financing of higher education, student loans, labor markets, quality of education, and science, technology and innovation. He holds a master degree in development economics from the University of Aarhus.

George Borjas
Economic Advisors for the Governor of California (1993-1998), of the National Academy of Sciences Panel on the Demographic and Economic Impact of Immigration (1995-97), and chaired the National Science Foundation’s Committee of Visitors for the Economics Program (1996). Professor Borjas has also been a consultant to the Office of the Attorney General of the State of California, to the World Bank, and to law firms engaged in litigation involving employment and wage-setting in labor markets.

Derek Chen
Dr. Chen is an Economist with in the Growth and Crisis Practice of the World Bank Institute. Dr. Chen, a Singapore national, joined the World Bank in 2000, after obtaining his Ph.D. in Economics from the University of California at Davis. His fields of specialization include economic growth, poverty analysis and demographic economics (Papers available at http://ssrn.com/author=75222). Dr. Chen leads WBI’s research efforts on the effects of knowledge accumulation on long-term economic growth and employment, and he also oversees the initiative on the Knowledge Assessment Methodology (KAM - (www.worldbank.org/kam)), an on-line database and benchmarking tool that shows economies’ progress towards the knowledge economy. Currently, Dr. Chen heads the World Bank Institute's Social Protection and Labor team.

Yoonyoung Cho
Ms. Yoonyoung (Yoon) Cho is an economist at the labor markets team in the World Bank’s Social Protection unit. She was educated at the Seoul National University, Korea (ROK), majoring in economics. In 2000, she moved to the University of Wisconsin-Madison, US., to pursue her Ph.D. studies in economics. Her field of research interest lies in public and labor economics, and applied micro-econometrics. During her stay at the UW-Madison, besides receiving a PhD. in Economics, she worked as a research fellow at the Institute of Research on Poverty and as a short term consultant to the World Bank (LAC). After finishing her PhD. in 2005, she joined the Korea Development Institute in Seoul, where she worked as an associate research fellow for three years. During this period, she engaged in academic research and provided consultancy regarding human capital / family policies to the government of Korea. In 2008, she joined the Bank as a Young Professional. She has published papers mainly on human capital labor, education, and health, and is currently conducting research on labor market issues including the impacts of financial crisis, policies to foster skills and employability, and impacts of vocational training.

Wendy Cunningham
Ms. Cunningham is the Coordinator for the World Bank’s program on Child and Youth Development and the manager of the Bank’s Child and Youth Development Unit. She is responsible for supporting the Bank’s efforts to provide evidence-based program and policy advice and operational support on a range of child and youth development issues in developing countries, with a particular focus on early child development, school-to-work transition, and youth violence. Before joining the C&Y Unit, Wendy was a senior economist in the Human Development Department for Latin America and the Caribbean (LAC), where she led studies and projects in social protection, labor markets, and youth development. Wendy has a Ph.D. in labor economics from the University of Illinois, and has a strong publications record on labor markets, informal sector employment, gender, and youth development.
Amit Dar
Amit Dar is a Senior Economist in the Social Protection Group of the World Bank. He has extensive experience in labor market and vocational education and training related issues. His recent work includes publications on "Active Labor Market Programs: A Review of the Evidence from Evaluations" and a joint World Bank-ILO book on "Vocational Education and Training Reform: Matching Skills to Markets and Budgets". He has also worked on labor market and related issues in Brazil, Egypt, Indonesia, Jamaica, Laos, Nigeria, Tanzania, Thailand and Zambia. He holds a Ph.D. in economics from Brown University.

Mitali Das
Mitali Das is a Senior Economist at the IMF. Prior to her joining the Fund, she was an Associate Professor of Economics at Columbia University for 8 years, and at the University of California in Davis for 3 years. She received a PhD in Economics from MIT in 1998, and a A.B in Economics and International Relations from Mount Holyoke College in 1993.

Damien de Walque
Mr. de Walque is an Economist in the Development Research Group (Human Development and Public Services Team). He received his Ph.D in Economics from the University of Chicago in 2003. His research interests include health and education and the interactions between them. He is currently involved in a study on the relationship between schooling and HIV infection in Uganda, as well as analyzing the effect of education on other health outcomes, like smoking behaviors. He is working on evaluating the impact of HIV/AIDS interventions and policies in several African countries. He also develops a research agenda focusing on the analysis of the long-term consequences of mortality crises.

Louise Fox
Ms. Fox is currently Lead Economist and Lead Specialist, Poverty, in the Africa Region PREM. In this capacity, she is advisor to the Director and Sector Managers in Eastern and Southern Africa on poverty work in the Africa region. She has published several studies on poverty reduction in Africa and on labor markets and labor regulation, and has recently completed a book on Working Out of Poverty: Job Creation and the Quality of Growth in Africa (with Melissa Gaal). She founded the Africa Regional Labor Markets Analysis Working Group (which she leads jointly with SP colleagues). Her publication “Attacking Africa’s Poverty: Experience from the Ground,” is an analysis of the political economy of poverty reduction in Africa, including twelve case studies of successful large scale poverty reduction programs. Prior to her current position, Ms. Fox spent more than 15 years working on issues of labor market adjustments, poverty and social protection in transition economies, including: China and Mongolia, the Baltic States, Romania, Bulgaria, the Czech Republic and the Former Soviet Union. Before that she researched poverty, inequality and macroeconomic adjustment in Latin America. She has also published in the areas of pension reform, reform of child welfare systems, social protection in Eastern and Central Europe, female headed households and child welfare, stabilization policies and poverty reduction, the social costs of adjustment, and the economic history of poverty and inequality in Brazil.

Richard B. Freeman
Richard B. Freeman holds the Herbert Ascherman Chair in Economics at Harvard University, and is currently serving as Faculty Director of the Labor and Worklife Program at the Harvard Law School. He directs the NBER / Sloan Science Engineering Workforce Project, and is Senior

Ronnie Goldberg
Ms. Goldberg is USCIB’s chief policy officer, overseeing our wide-ranging activities on international trade, investment, economic and regulatory matters, and supervising a staff of policy professionals whose expertise covers a host of issues affecting American companies engaged in business abroad. She also coordinates USCIB policies in relation to those of our international affiliates – ICC, BIAC and IOE – and various other groups, and she serves as the U.S. employer representative on the International Labor Organization’s Governing Body. Prior to joining USCIB in 1987, Ms. Goldberg served as vice president for international affairs at the New York Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and as a vice president in the trade and export finance division of Chase Manhattan Bank. From 1978 to 1982, she was a project director at the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, specializing in East-West trade, technology transfer and Soviet energy development. Ms. Goldberg received a bachelor’s degree in political science from Bryn Mawr College. The recipient of both Woodrow Wilson and Ford Fellowships, she holds a master’s degree in the history of political thought from the London School of Economics and a Ph.D. in political science from the University of Chicago. She is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and an adjunct assistant professor at New York University.

Rebekka Grun
Rebekka Grun is a Senior Economist with over twelve years experience advising public sector clients on the design, appraisal, implementation and evaluation of policies. She has worked with the World Bank since 2005, most recently leading the labor market dialogue in Tunisia, managing a CCT pilot in Morocco and providing impact evaluation advice and capacity building throughout the MENA region. Before joining the Bank, she worked as a Team Leader in the UK Prime Minister’s Strategy Unit and managed a series of Human Development projects, including a simulation model for social assistance and tax credits, the Government’s strategy to enhance social mobility, and support to the new Childcare Bill 2005. She also led various projects at the interface of education and the labor market, both as Civil Servant and as Project Manager with Frontier Economics Ltd., for example the economic appraisal of policies for the Skills White Paper 2005 of the Department for Education and Skills (UK); and the re-organization of the delivery of work, training and career advice through linking up various relevant Government institutions. Rebekka completed her PhD in Economics while working, and has written and published a series of papers applying the methods of econometric impact evaluation to policy issues in the education, health and social protection sectors, with European, African and South American data.

Mary Hallward-Dreimeier
Ms. Hallward-Dreimeier is a Senior Economist in the Development Research Group of the World Bank. Since joining the World Bank as a Young Professional in 1997, she has published articles on firm productivity, the impact of the investment climate on firm performance and determinants of foreign direct investment. She was the Deputy Director for the World Development Report 2005: A Better Investment Climate for Everyone. She helped establish the World Bank’s Enterprise Surveys Program, now covering over 70,000 enterprises in 100 countries. She is also a founding member of the Microeconomics of Growth Network. She received her M.Sc. in Development Economics from Oxford University and received her Ph.D. in Economics from M.I.T.

John C. Haltiwanger
Mr. Haltiwanger, Professor of Economics at the University of Maryland, received his Ph.D. from the Johns Hopkins University in 1981. After serving on the faculty of UCLA and Johns Hopkins, he joined the faculty at Maryland in 1987. In the late 1990s, he served as Chief Economist of the U.S. Census Bureau. He is a Senior Research Fellow with the Longitudinal Employer Household Dynamics Program at the Bureau of the Census, a Research Associate of the Center for Economic Studies at the Bureau of the Census and of the National Bureau of Economic Research. His recent research has exploited the newly created longitudinal establishment data bases and the longitudinal matched employer-employee data bases that are available at the Bureau of the Census. This research centers on the churning of firms, jobs and workers in the U.S. economy and the implications of this churning for U.S. productivity growth and the dynamics of the labor market. In addition to his work using U.S. firm level data, his recent research has considered the role of productivity enhancing restructuring and reallocation for advanced, emerging and transition economies. He has published more than 80 academic articles and numerous books including Job Creation and Destruction (with Steven Davis and Scott Schuh, MIT Press) and Economic Turbulence: Is a Volatile Economy Good for America? (With Clair Brown and Julia Lane, University of Chicago Press).

Jesko Hentschel
Mr. Jesko Hentschel is currently a sector manager in Human Development of Europe and Central Asia Region. Prior to this, he took field positions for Human Development and Poverty Reduction and Economic Management in Turkey, Argentina, and Madagascar. He has also worked in Latin America and Caribbean region and the central poverty group. He has conducted research on poverty measurement, combining qualitative and quantitative methods, rapid survey assessments, spatial poverty development and externalities of service provision. Before joining the Bank, he taught as a lecturer for several years at Potsdam University in development studies.

Polly Jones
Polly Jones is a principal operations officer at the World Bank. She has worked in both the Africa and Latin America regions. She worked as a country economist and also has managed poverty assessments. She also has worked on social protection issues in Brazil, Argentina, and Chile.

Jochen Kluve
Mr. Kluve is head of the Berlin office of RWI, an economic research institute / think tank based in Essen, Germany. He was head of RWI's labor unit from 2003 until 2007. Mr Kluve has published on issues related to labor market policies, program evaluation, and meta analyses. His expertise extends to impact evaluations of development interventions, covering various countries in Latin America, Africa, and Asia. Prior to joining RWI, Mr Kluve was a post-doctoral fellow at the Center for Labor Economics, UC Berkeley (2001-2003). He studied economics at Trinity College Dublin (MLitt Econ 1999) and the University of Heidelberg (Diploma 1997, Ph.D. 2002).

Alan Krueger
Alan Krueger advises the Secretary on all aspects of economic policy, including current and prospective macroeconomic developments and the development and analysis of the Administration’s economic initiatives. He is currently on leave from Princeton University where he is the Bendheim Professor of Economics and Public Affairs at Princeton University, where he has held a joint appointment in the Economics Department and the Woodrow Wilson School since 1987. In 1994-95 Mr. Krueger served as chief economist at the U.S. Department of Labor. Mr. Krueger has published widely on the economics of education, unemployment, income distribution, social insurance, regulation, terrorism, interest rates and the environment. He has been a research associate of the National Bureau of Economic Research, a member of the editorial board of Science and has served as chief economist for the Council for Economic Education. He is the author of What Makes A Terrorist: Economics and the Roots of Terrorism and Education Matters: A Selection of Essays on Education and co-author of Myth and Measurement: The New Economics of the Minimum Wage and of Inequality in America: What Role for Human Capital Policies? Prior to assuming his current position, Mr. Krueger was a member of the Board of Directors of the Russell Sage Foundation, the MacArthur Foundation and the American Institutes for Research. He was named a Sloan Fellow in Economics in 1992 and an NBER Olin Fellow in 1989-90. He was elected a Fellow of the Econometric Society in 1996, a Fellow of the Society of Labor Economists in 2005 and a member of the Executive Committee of the American Economic Association in 2004. He was awarded the Kershaw Prize by the Association for Public Policy and Management in 1997 (for distinguished contributions to public policy analysis by someone under the age of 40) and the Mahalanobis Memorial Medal by the Indian Econometric Society in 2001. In 2002 he was elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts & Sciences, and in 2003 he was elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. He was awarded the IZA Prize in Labor Economics with David Card in 2006. From March 2000 to February 2009 he was a regular contributor to the "Economic Scene" and Economix blog in The New York Times. Mr. Krueger received a B.S. degree, with honors, from Cornell University’s School of Industrial & Labor Relations in 1983, an A.M. in Economics from Harvard University in 1985, and a Ph.D. in Economics from Harvard University in 1987.
Yevgeny Kuznetsov
Dr. Kuznetsov is a Senior Economist in the Growth and Crisis Practice of the World Bank Institute. He joined the World Bank in 1995 as a Young Professional from Brookings Institution. A specialist in technological innovation, he focuses on political economy of reforms of innovation and higher education systems in middle income economies and India. He has acquired a unique perspective on reforms which blends insights of a practitioner (through cross-support to lending operations in Argentina, Chile, India, Mexico, Russia and other economies) and a scholar (more than 20 articles and books on innovation and knowledge based growth). In recent years he also focuses on diasporas of highly skilled as change agents to promote institutional development in home countries.

William F. Maloney
Mr. Maloney is Lead Economist in the World Bank’s Office of the Chief Economist (OCE) of the Latin America and Caribbean region. Dr. Maloney has published on issues related to international trade and finance, innovation and technological progress, and developing country labor markets. He has written extensively on issues of informality and micro firm dynamics, including co-authoring the recent Informality: Exit and Exclusion. Before joining the Bank permanently, Mr. Maloney was a Professor of Economics at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign (1990-1997). Mr. Maloney received his B.A. from Harvard University (1981) and did graduate work at the University of the Andes in Bogota, Colombia (1982-83) and the University of California Berkeley where he received his Ph.D. in Economics (1990).

Sebastian Martinez
Sebastian Martinez is an Economist in the World Bank’s Human Development Network. He holds a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of California at Berkeley, with a specialization in development economics and applied micro-econometrics. His work focuses on the evaluation of social programs and policies in the developing world, spanning the areas of health, labor, education, social protection and housing. Sebastian has led the design and implementation of over a dozen large scale impact evaluations and has provided technical advice to over one hundred projects worldwide.

Jean-Christophe Maur
Jean-Christophe Maur is a Senior Economist in the Growth and Crisis unit of WBI. His main area of focus is international economic policy, trade, and frontiers of development policy as they relate to global integration. Prior to working with the World Bank, he was an Economic Adviser in the UK Department for International Development advising on WTO negotiations. Before that he served as Principal Case Officer in the Office of Fair Trading, the UK competition enforcement authority and as a long term consultant on regional trade agreements for the European Commission’s Euro-Mediterranean Partnership. Jean-Christophe has a Doctorate in Economics from Sciences-Po in Paris and is a graduate from ESSEC Business School.

Barbara Murray
Ms. Barbara Murray is Senior Disability Specialist in the International Labour Office Skills and Employability Department, working primarily on disability issues in training and employment. Key elements of her work in Geneva include the development of the ILO Code of Practice on Managing Disability in the Workplace, which was adopted by the ILO in 2001; promoting ratification and implementation of ILO Convention No. 159 concerning Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment (Disabled Persons); and representing the ILO at sessions of the Ad Hoc Committee on the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, adopted in December 2006. At present, she is involved in knowledge development on good practice in training and employment of disabled persons; providing policy advice to governments in the development and implementation of disability-related laws, policies and programmes based on the principles of equal opportunity, equal treatment and non-discrimination; and technical cooperation projects relating to the training and employment of disabled persons. Prior to coming to ILO Headquarters in Geneva in 2000, she worked for four years as ILO Senior Vocational Rehabilitation Specialist for the Asian and Pacific Region, based in Bangkok, Thailand, providing policy advice and technical cooperation services to countries throughout the region. Before joining the ILO in 1996, she worked in the research department of the National Rehabilitation Board in Dublin, Ireland, and was involved in applied research in Ireland and other European countries, including research initiated by the Council of Europe. Through her work in the area of disability for over twenty years, in Europe as well as countries of the Asian and Pacific region and Africa, she is familiar with disability-related legislation, policy, programmes and services internationally. Barbara holds a Doctoral degree in Sociology from the University of Zurich, Switzerland, and a Masters degree in Economics from University College, Dublin, Ireland.

David Newhouse
Mr. Newhouse joined the World Bank’s Social Protection unit as a Labor Economist in November 2008. He first joined the World Bank in August 2007, based in Jakarta, and co-led the Indonesian Jobs Report. Prior to that, he worked for three years as a consultant in the Poverty and Social Impact Analysis unit of the IMF, and two years in the consumer protection division of the Federal Trade Commission. David holds a PhD from Cornell University, and has published on diverse topics in labor economics, the economics of education, and health economics.

Azedine Ouerghi
Mr. Ouerghi is a Lead Human Development Economist leading the social protection program of the World Bank Institute. A former fellow researcher in the French Atomic Energy Agency, he started his career at the World Bank with long term field assignments as manager for poverty and social protection related programs in South Asia, Africa and the Middle East. Mr. Ouerghi is one of the pioneers in the design, implementation and analysis of household surveys used to inform policy makers in Tunisia (1983), in Yemen (1987), Zambia (1989) and Pakistan (1991-93). Mr. Ouerghi then joined the Bank's Operations working for 3 years on West Africa before joining the World Bank Institute in 1996. He received his Ph.D. in production economics jointly from the Institut National des Sciences et Techniques Nucléaires and Paris IV-Dauphine in 1986.

Pierella Paci
Ms. Paci is a Lead Economist in the Poverty Reduction and Development Effectiveness group at the World Bank where she leads the Employment and Inclusive Growth team and the unit work on the financial crisis. Before joining the World Bank she was a professor of economics at the University of Sussex (UK) and City University (London). She holds degrees in economics from the University of Rome (Italy), the University of York (UK) and Manchester (UK).

Carmen Pages
Ms. Pages is a principal research economist at the Inter-American Development (IADB). A native of Spain, she holds a MA degree in Economics from the Universidad Autonoma de Barcelona and a Ph. D in Economics from Boston University. She has published extensively in the areas of labor economics and institutions. Her current interests lie on studying the determinants of productivity growth, the effects of labor market institutions and policies on economic outcomes, and the determinants of informal employment.

Dhushyanth Raju
Dhushyanth Raju is an Economist in South Asia Region Human Development Department (SASHD) at the World Bank. He currently works on issues in the economics of education. He has a Bachelor’s degree in Economics from Grinnell College and a PhD in economics from Cornell University.

Bassam Ramadan
Bassam Ramadan’s career at the World Bank spans 20 years during which he worked across the three Human Development sector families, Social Protection, education and health. He has spent a number of years in Bank country offices where he led the Bank’s policy dialogue in cross-cutting economic and sector issues, managed multi-sectoral teams and tasks and delivered a number of lending, analytical and knowledge products. Before becoming Sector Manager for Social Protection and Labor in the Human Development Network Vice-Presidency, he held various positions in the Middle East and Africa regions. Bassam has frequently served as advisor to the Lebanese government on social policy, governance and international cooperation. His areas of expertise are: development economics, social protection, agricultural policy, food security and social safety nets. Before joining the Bank he held the position of Assistant Professor of Economics at the American University of Beirut. Bassam holds a PhD in economics from Cornell University.

Helena Ribe
Helena Ribe is the Sector Manager for Social Protection in the Latin America and Caribbean region in the World Bank. She manages a large program of loans, technical assistance and analytical studies, as well as most of the CCT programs in the region, including a Community of Practice which meets regularly to exchange experiences and knowledge and includes senior managers of the CCT programs in Brazil, Colombia, Chile, Mexico and El Salvador. Ms. Ribe has worked in the World Bank during thirty years where she has held the positions of Lead Economist, Sector Leader and Sector Manager in Africa and Latin America and is one of the Bank’s leading experts in social protection and labor market policies and programs. Previously she worked in South and East Asia and in the Bank’s research department where, among other things, she was one of the co-authors of the 1990 World Development Report on Poverty. Ms. Ribe holds a PhD in Economics from Yale University and a BA from Universidad de los Andes in Colombia, her country of origin.

Raymond Robertson
Raymond Robertson received his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Texas at Austin. His dissertation and subsequent research focus on international, development, and labor economics. Prior to receiving his Ph. D., he attended and graduated from Trinity University in San Antonio, Texas. Following graduation from Trinity, he spent a year on a Fulbright grant in Mexico City studying the effects of NAFTA. A Social Science Research Council (SSRC) fellowship supported his dissertation field research in Mexico City. As an assistant professor, he was the top-ranked liberal arts assistant professor in economics for publishing. His early research was supported by a three-year Research in Undergraduate Institutions (RUI) grant from the National Science Foundation. He has been a non-resident fellow of the Center for Global

Furio Camillo Rosati
Mr. Rosati is a Professor of Public Finance at the University of Tor Vergata, Rome in the Faculty of Economics. He received a B.A. in Economics from the University of Rome, Faculty of Law (1976), a Master of Science in Economics (1979) and a Philosophy Doctor in Economics, both from the London School of Economics and Political Science (1984). In addition to his position at the University of Tor Vergata, Professor Rosati is currently the Project Manager for "Understanding Children's Work" (UCW) an inter-agency research initiative on child labor involving the International Labor Organization, UNICEF and the World Bank. UCW was established in 2000 and is aimed at improving information and research capacity in the area of child labor. His research interests include public economics, household economics and development economics, and he has published in leading international journals.

Friederike Rother
Friederike Rother works as an Operations Officer in the Social Protection and Labor Markets Unit at the World Bank. Within the Labor Market Team, Ms. Rother is mainly tasked with managing a multidonor trustfund project (MDTF) on "Labor Markets, Job Creation, and Economic Growth: Scaling up Research, Capacity Building, and Action on the Ground," which aims at promoting effective policy-making in the area of job creation in developing countries. The project’s regional coverage includes Sub Saharan Africa, Europe, Central Asia, Northern Africa and the Middle East. Friederike’s recent research has focused on youth employment and she worked on establishing the World Bank’s global youth employment inventory (YEI). Prior to working at the World Bank, Ms. Rother was an officer in the Labor Market and Economic Policy Unit of the German Employers’ Association (BDA) and an adviser with the German Development Corporation (GTZ). In these positions, she has worked and published on issues such as Investment Climate and Job Creation, Impact Evaluation of Employment Programs, Demographics, and Migration. She holds a Masters Degree in Public Policy from the Institut d’Etudes Politiques de Paris (Science Po) and an MA in International Relations from the Free University of Berlin.

Michal Rutkowski
Michal Rutkowski is Sector Manager for Social Protection in the Europe and Central Asia Region of the World Bank (since 1997), and former Director of the Office of Pension Reform of the Government of Poland (1996-1997). He received his Ph.D. from the Warsaw School of Economics (1987), and continued post-graduate studies at the London School of Economics. Before joining the World Bank, he was an Associate Professor teaching economics and doing research work in labor economics, comparative economics, and macroeconomics in the Institute for Economic Policy of the Warsaw School of Economics, and Centre for Labour Economics at the London School of Economics. He published papers on labor hoarding in centrally planned economies, labor market adjustment during macroeconomic shocks, wage bargaining, repressed inflation, unemployment, income policy, public sector employment, social insurance and social assistance systems. He is a graduate of the Executive Development Program at Harvard Business School (1999).
Kalanidhi Subbarao
Mr. Subbarao is currently working as a consultant on social protection issues in the South Asia Region of the World Bank. Previously, he was a Lead Economist and worked extensively on poverty analysis, particularly in the domain of safety nets, and participated in numerous operations bearing on social protection in Africa, Central and South Asia including in East Asian countries following the financial crisis of 1997. He is the main author of two Bank publications, Safety Net Programs and Poverty Reduction: Lessons from Cross-Country Experience(1997), and Reaching Out to Africa's Orphans: A Framework for Public Action (2004).

Yu Sun
Ms. Sun is currently a Consultant with the Growth and Crisis Practice of the World Bank Institute, where she joined in 2008. Apart from delivering courses in education and social protection, she also develops and maintains the Knowledge Assessment Methodology (www.worldbank.org/kam). Ms. Sun is currently a Ph.D. candidate in economics at the George Washington University, USA. Her major fields include macroeconomics, econometrics and labor economics. Her current research is on finance, entrepreneurship and inequality. Ms. Sun received her Bachelor and Master Degrees in economics from Fudan University, China.

Maurizia Tovo
Maurizia Tovo is a Lead Technical Specialist in the Human Development unit covering West Africa at the World Bank. She has co-authored a book on child labor practices in Africa (“Children at Work”) and coordinates the Orphans and Vulnerable Children Thematic Group. Her operational work on child labor has focused on the worst forms of child labor, including street children, child soldiers and children victims of trafficking. She also manages operations to create employment for youth. She holds a PhD in Sociology from Vanderbilt University (USA) and an M.A. in pedagogy from the University of Turin (Italy).

Arvil Van Adams
Mr. Adams is an economist and an international consultant on employment and training issues. Prior to his retirement from the World Bank in 2005, he was Sr. Advisor for Social Protection in the Africa Region. He joined the World Bank in 1989, and previously was Professor of Economics and Director of the Doctoral Program in Public Policy, George Washington University 1979-89 and served as Executive Director of the U.S. National Commission on Employment and Unemployment Statistics 1977-79. He has been a faculty member at the University of Utah and the Ohio State University. He is the author of numerous professional publications. He was co-author of the World Bank Policy Paper on Technical and Vocational Education and Training (1991) and the accompanying book Skills for Productivity (Oxford University Press, 1993). He is co-author of Skills Development in Sub-Saharan Africa (World Bank 2004).

Milan Vodopivec
Mr. Vodopivec, a Slovenian national, received a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Maryland, College Park, in 1989. The same year he joined the Work Bank, where he has worked in the Research Department and Human Development Network. He was heavily involved in the World Bank’s work on labor markets in transition economies, and he conducted two comprehensive research projects on labor market adjustment (Slovenia and Estonia). During his
Shahid Yusuf
Shahid Yusuf holds a Ph.D. in Economics from Harvard University, and a BA in Economics from Cambridge University. He joined the World Bank in 1974 as a Young Professional and while at the Bank spent more than 35 years tackling issues confronting developing countries. During his tenure at the World Bank, Dr. Yusuf was the team leader for the World Bank-Japan project on East Asia’s Future Economy from 2000-2009. He was the Director of the World Development Report 1999/2000, Entering the 21st Century. Prior to that, he was Economic Adviser to the Senior Vice President and Chief Economist (1997-98), Lead Economist for the East Africa Department (1995-97) and Lead Economist for the China and Mongolia Department (1989-1993). Dr. Yusuf has written extensively on development issues, with a special focus on East Asia and has also published widely in various academic journals. His three most recent books are: "Development Economics Through the Decades" (World Bank 2009); "Tiger Economies Under Threat" with Kaoru Nabeshima (World Bank 2009); and Two Dragonheads: Contrasting Development Paths for Beijing and Shanghai" also with Kaoru Nabeshima (World Bank 2010).