UNIFORM FRAMEWORK FOR PREVENTING AND COMBATING FRAUD AND CORRUPTION

On February 18, 2006, the leaders of the African Development Bank Group, Asian Development Bank, European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, European Investment Bank Group, International Monetary Fund, Inter-American Development Bank Group and the World Bank Group agreed to establish a Joint International Financial Institution Anti-Corruption Task Force to work towards a consistent and harmonized approach to combat corruption in the activities and operations of the member institutions. The leaders of the member institutions recognize that a unified and coordinated approach is critical to the success of the shared effort to fight corruption and prevent it from undermining the effectiveness of their work.

The International Financial Institutions (IFI) Task Force has agreed on the following recommended elements of a harmonized strategy to combat corruption in the activities and operations of the member institutions.¹

1. Definitions of Fraudulent and Corrupt Practices

Critical to the success of a harmonized approach is a common understanding of the practices prohibited. To this end, the Task Force has agreed in principle on the following standardized definitions of fraudulent and corrupt practices for investigating such practices in activities financed by the member institutions.

- A corrupt practice is the offering, giving, receiving, or soliciting, directly or indirectly, anything of value to influence improperly the actions of another party.
- A fraudulent practice is any act or omission, including a misrepresentation, that knowingly or recklessly misleads, or attempts to mislead, a party to obtain a financial or other benefit or to avoid an obligation.
- A coercive practice is impairing or harming, or threatening to impair or harm, directly or indirectly, any party or the property of the party to influence improperly the actions of a party.
- A collusive practice is an arrangement between two or more parties designed to achieve an improper purpose, including influencing improperly the actions of another party.

Each of the member institutions will determine implementation within its relevant policies and procedures, and consistent with international conventions.

¹ The Management of the IMF supports and encourages these efforts to fight corruption in project lending and dealings with private firms. Unlike the other member institutions, the IMF does not engage in project lending or lending to the private sector. It maintains procedures tailored to the circumstances of the IMF to deal with potential issues of staff misconduct and safeguard the use of Fund resources.

2. Principles and Guidelines for Investigations

It is recognized that detection, investigation and sanctions are vital to effectively deterring corrupt activities. All investigations must be thorough, professional and respectful of the parties involved. To promote consistency in the practices of the member institutions' investigative units, the Task Force has endorsed the attached common principles and guidelines for investigations.

3. Exchange of Information

The Task Force has recognized that exchange of relevant information among member institutions will promote a common approach and enhance cooperation in addressing integrity issues in their activities. It is also critical to ensure that the confidentiality of information be maintained so whistleblowers and others remain confident in their ability to communicate with member institutions. The IFI Task Force has agreed that the institutions should exchange information, as appropriate, in connection with investigations into fraudulent and corrupt practices consistent with these principles.

4. Integrity Due Diligence

The member institutions of the IFI Task Force recognize the need to promote ethical business practices and good governance consistent with international standards as part of their lending and investment decisions. Accordingly, the Task Force recommends that member institutions will be guided by the following general principles in analyzing integrity issues relating to private sector lending and investment decisions:

- adequate “know-your-customer” procedures to ensure identification of beneficial ownership;
- close scrutiny of parties that have been convicted of or are under investigation for serious crimes, investigated or sanctioned by a regulatory body or appearing on a sanctions list recognized by the member institution;
- close scrutiny of parties involved in civil litigation involving allegations of financial misconduct;
- close scrutiny of Politically Exposed Persons consistent with the recommendations of the Financial Action Task Force;
- identification of mitigants and enforcement of covenants that address integrity risks; and
- ongoing monitoring of integrity risks through portfolio management.

5. Mutual Recognition of Enforcement Actions

Each of the member institutions of the IFI Task Force has a distinct mechanism for addressing and sanctioning violations of its respective anti-corruption policies. The Task Force recognizes that mutual recognition of these enforcement actions would substantially assist in deterring and preventing corrupt practices. The member institutions will explore further how compliance and enforcement actions taken by one institution can be supported by the others. As an immediate step, the Task Force recommends that each member institution should seek to require all bidders, sponsors, or other firms or individuals participating in activities financed by a member institution to disclose any sanction imposed on that firm or individual by a member institution.

6. Support for Anti-Corruption Efforts of Member Countries

The Task Force recognizes the critical importance of ensuring integrity within the member institutions as well as the activities they finance. The Task Force also supports the initiatives of member countries and other stakeholders, including the press and judiciary, to increase transparency and accountability, strengthen governance and combat corruption.

To this end, the Task Force recommends that member institutions continue to develop analytical tools designed to assess risks of corruption in individual countries, sectors and regions and institutional capabilities to respond to those risks. In addition, member institutions should, within their respective mandates, seek to develop a proactive and coordinated approach to assist member countries and the private sector in the development of institutions, as well as administrative systems and policies that eliminate opportunities for fraudulent and corrupt practices.

The Task Force also recommends that the member institutions work to strengthen coordination on governance, integrity and anti-corruption activities and technical assistance with other donors, including in their activities in individual countries, to avoid duplication and maximize synergies. Where appropriate, member institutions also should assist executing agencies in evaluating integrity risks among potential contractors and in developing good governance and anti-corruption mechanisms.
